IN LONDON: AUTUMN

In Brief

WHAT TO DO, WHERE TO GO AND HOW TO SPEND YOUR STAY IN THE CAPITAL

IN STYLE

Zoë Irwin's hair-accessory styling masterclass (from £135 with Zoë or £75 with other John Frieda Alford Street stylists) could be the answer to bad hair days. Spend an hour with John Frieda's Creative Director learning how to complement your personal style, or try something new. From Gucci-inspired Seventies turban bands to oversized bows, Zoë will help you find your perfectly accessorised style.

IN BLOOM

Green-fingered duo, Kathryn Popplestone and Erni Visser, have the answer to fleeting floral arrangements. Using the latest biotechnological processes in floristry, the pair provide a beautiful alternative to synthetic and freeze-dried flowers, with bouquets (from £30) undergoing a unique biotech conservation process to maintain their freshness, beauty and scent for up to 12 months without sun or water.

BREATHE IN

The Great British weather was the inspiration for Jo Malone London's new City Edition London candle (£52). The dark, enigmatic scent of Pomegranate Noir has been paired with a hand-sketched illustration that represents the rain as well as angles, edges and idiosyncrasies that make London unique.

DRINK IT IN

Time to put the kettle on: Petersham Nurseries in Richmond has partnered with Canton Tea to create tutored tea masterclasses in its idyllic, private glasshouse at 4pm on 17 September and 5 November. Founder Jennifer Wood will be leading two 90-minute masterclasses, delving into the rich history of the leaves and letting guests taste rare and wild teas, including a sparkling cold infusion, and freshly made cakes.

MOVE IN

Ultra-prime developer, Northacre, has announced the joint agency of JLL and Clifton Property Partners for the sales of No. 1 Palace Street. Located near Buckingham Palace, it was constructed in 1860 to host the overflow of royal guests. With 72 uniquely designed apartments that translate the building's heritage to the inside, it boasts glorious views of the Palace gardens, stunning and bespoke interiors and access to personal staff around the clock.
